

Mark Luther Design:
Experience What Living
Beautifully Is All About

placement, room colors, bathrooms, kitchens, even basements and garages, are reviewed to maximize a home's appeal to prospective buyers. Recent staging clients were so impressed by how quickly their home sold they chose Luther as the interior designer of the new home they were building.

For teardown projects — a large portion of MLD's business — Luther works with the builder on the home's flow, room adjacencies and wall placement, along with material types and appointments for ceilings, lighting, kitchens and bathrooms. New spec homes present their own challenges, not the least of which is to intertwine a striking design with color neutrality to address the "unknown" homebuyer whom the builder cannot specially target. Spec homes are approached from the outside in, with the assessment and selection of exterior architectural components, such as roofing, siding and windows, which form an overall theme that influences the interior.

"It is all about the curb appeal," says Luther.

After decades of corporate commercial success, Luther founded MLD in 2001, at which time he specialized in interior design focusing on high-end bathroom and kitchen renovations. MLD has since evolved into a unique brand known throughout the greater New England area.

"As rewarding as it was, the main reason I left the corporate world behind was my desire to work one-on-one with clients toward attaining their dreams," he concludes. "It was a decision I will never regret. I want my clients to enjoy their homes and to 'experience what living beautifully is all about.'"

MLD has designed prestigious retail stores throughout the United States.
