NEW HOMES
& CONDOS

In contrast, the basement is basically a man-cave, with dark sexy charcoal, chocolate and gray hues with caramel — yet not so manly that women don't want to enter.

Hebson says that while being inspired by clients, her inspiration for the Campbell House in particular, is her mother.

"The home is a homage to my mom, who was in continuing care with dementia," said Hebson. "The main floor is about her. My mom always had a European flair to her decor — she was always mixing old and new, and always held it together. Our old stuff would get re-upholstered and we would freshen it up like every 10 years. Mom would always blend old and new together and our home always looked current. My dad was a collector, and my mom would also always make his collections look appropriate to the space."

Hebson says that she loves to bring an international flair to Edmonton, while still supporting local products and companies. She believes that making the company more commercial would make them lose some personality and freedom in the field.

"I am really proud of my little boutique design firm, and I am always going to stay home-based," said Hebson. "I want to be able to shop where I want to for my customers — whether I'm going for really cool French country design, or a modern loft. We will always be a small boutique design firm."
