

HOPE'S RESIDENCE

As we grow older, we often need a little more help to complete daily tasks and chores. Errands like doing weekly shopping, or simple tasks like cooking our daily meals may become more strenuous or difficult to complete on our own. Often, family members may step in to provide the additional assistance needed, but this is not always manageable for them as our care needs change and becomes more substantial. This is where residential assisted living can help.

WHAT IS RESIDENTIAL ASSISTED LIVING?

Each senior adult has their own unique care needs. Some may need more extensive care, such as what may be provided at a nursing home, while others may need very minimal care, such as what may be provided by a family member. In other circumstances where a senior needs daily care, they can benefit from a residential assisted living community. These types of communities offer a balanced care routine, so the basic needs of a resident such as grooming, meals, and medicine administration are met, while residents still enjoy as much independence as possible.

THE BENEFITS OF RESIDENTIAL ASSISTED LIVING COMMUNITIES

Although it is often overlooked, mental health is extremely important for senior citizens. It is common for seniors to feel frustrated and overly dependent on their loved ones. However, at Hope's Residence, we aim to support our residents as well as their families providing the care and the socialization they need to thrive. Residents can now depend on a team of professionally trained and compassionate caregivers, allowing their other treasured relationships to become more relaxed. Our residents also benefit from having peer relationships who share common interests and hobbies, giving them another social support network. Our robust activities program also allows our residents to form new bonds and lasting friendships, while allowing them basic exercises that can help them remain both mentally and physically healthy.

CARE YOU CAN COUNT ON

Hope's Residence is owned and operated by an on-site Registered Nurse with over 30 years healthcare experience. Additionally, our professional caregivers are trained in taking care of aging seniors and providing them with specialized support. They monitor the wellbeing of each resident to ensure they remain healthy and comfortable. For example, our caregivers are trained in several areas helpful to families like wound and diabetic care, medication administration and so much more!
